

Product Guide & Services

As a family business we endeavour to build and maintain close relationships with all our customers and suppliers, be they local or global. Founded in 1999, we have always been dedicated to giving individual attention and a personalised service.

Woodstock strives to get it right first time so a lot of hard work has been put into sourcing quality products, providing prompt competitive quotes and delivering goods on time.

Being forward thinking, we believe that investing in the company is crucial as we continue to develop and increase our range of services. Flexibility in delivering those services will enable us to provide whatever our clients require.

Woodstock's fabrication shop allows us to produce holding-down bolts, tailor-made items of all sizes to your requirements. We can also create a variety of light fabrication work to your specifications along with detailed drawings.

Woodstock Industrial Supplies Ltd offers a myriad of specialised items to satisfy our clients' needs. In addition to the core fastener range, the stores can set aside dedicated areas for specific clients.

We work with several industries including marine, petro-chem, rail, OEM's, construction, engineering, structural steelwork and a variety of utilities. Our team has the capability to source industrial items from around the globe.

The team's experience in a variety of industries has provided valuable lessons on how to work under pressure and respond quickly.

At Woodstock Industrial Supplies, we are nuts about bolts, and riveted by screws.

Thread Locking

Woodstock Industrial Supplies

The Tuflok Blue Nylon patch when applied is permanently fused onto the screw thread of the parent component, and increases the prevailing removal torque. This allows the screw to be locked in any position upon assembly.

Tuflok 180 is a blue nylon patch permanently fused to the screw thread. This process provides excellent vibration resistance and torque performance for all applications requiring controlled loading and re-usability.

Wirelock Wire locking is a very low cost and entirely effective method of locking nuts, cap screws or hex headed screws and bolts screwed into surfaces. It is mainly used when a number of screws have to be locked. Holes are predrilled in the items being locked and when all of the items have been fully tightened the wire is threaded through the holes and the ends are twisted to prevent loosening. The routing of the wire is such that it prevents the screws from unscrewing. The wire is selected as non-corrodible ductile steel or brass wire of suitable small gauge is used for this purpose.

Wedgelock Pellet type self locking threaded fasteners obtain locking action from a permanently embedded engineered plastic pellet compressed into a hole drilled in the threaded region of the fastener. The locking action, partly produced by friction developed between the pellet and the mating thread, results from the metal to metal thread friction opposite the locking pellet. The pellet acts as a wedge and creates a counter thrust when deformed.
